RESUME HEARING IN BEALES CASE

Six Witnesses Heard when Testimony was again Taken at York. Attorneys Give up their Sparring. Small Number of Spectators.

In an effort to show that outside assistance was given in counting the ballots and that voters, not physically disabled, were given help at the November election, Mr. Brodbeck's representatives this morning called six witnesses when the taking of testimony in the local congressional controversy was resumed in the Court House at York.

A falling off in public interest was very apparent, only about thirty five or forty spectators being present during the morning. The attorneys for the two sides displayed an entirely different attitude from that which characterized the previous hearings and were noticeably more courteous to each other.

The witnesses included judges of elections in the second precinct of the ninth ward, and in the second precinct of the sixth ward. Their testimony, and that of the other witnesses called, indicated that there was no outside assistance in the counting of the ballots, that no outsider was near the ballots after they were taken from the box, and that little assistance was given to voters, and then only when asked. Both parties gave this help, witnesses stated.

Paul N. Platts, a Democratic committeeman in the second precinct, sixth ward, in answer to a question by Attorney Black, in cross-examination said that he received from Clarence Geesey $5 for services on election day and $2.50 for information prior to that time, saying that he was working under Geesey's direction. This was the only time during the morning that money was brought into the evidence.

Samuel Bush, judge in the second precinct, sixth ward, and Fred Appel, judge in the second precinct, ninth ward, said they had received copies of the letter sent out by County Chairman Atkins asking that a list be kept of voters given assistance. Both said they did not observe the request, Mr. Bush stating that he did not do it because he believed it illegal.

Arthur Keller and Charles Small, Republican watchers in the same precinct, said that they were present when the vote was counted and that everything was carried on in a legal way. Mr. Keller admitted giving assistance to voters in marking their tickets, saying that several had requested it on the ground that they were not sufficiently intelligent to do it alone.

The testimony of George Schwenk, a Democratic inspector in the sixth ward, corroborated that of Platts and Bush. The hearing was resumed this afternoon. No testimony will be taken Wednesday but it will be heard again on Thursday.

Mr. Brodbeck III
Congressman Brodbeck, who several weeks ago submitted to an operation for relief from a carbuncle on the back of his neck, is again similarly afflicted. Two carbuncles have developed near the spot from which a surgeon removed by means of the knife the previous carbuncle.

Mr. Brodbeck was suffering much pain to-day and his appearance was that of a sick man. In discussing his physical condition with a reporter he said:

"My physician advises me to undergo another operation. I think I shall have to submit to his advice. This is the third attack of carbuncles I have had within the past few months and I am becoming alarmed. My condition is such that I may be prevented from returning to Washington to-morrow. My malady comes at a most unfortunate time. It is preventing me from giving proper attention to this contest, but I am not going to withdraw."

BIGLERVILLE TO HAVE A LOCK-UP

Village Prison to be so Constructed that there will be Little Danger to Escape. Experience of Past Week Showed Need.

Biglerville is to have a lock-up. The need for such an institution was so clearly demonstrated during the past ten days that council has decided to add a bastille to its other holdings and a village jail will soon be a reality.

The place is located at the side of the recently erected hose house and is the building formerly used by the fire company. It is a structure 30x12 and the rear half of the building is being converted into the lock-up. Two cells lined with sheet iron, making them fire-proof as well as "escape-proof", together with a "lobby", compose the floor plans. The front part of the building will be used as a storage room for the borough appliances.

When the third arrest in the robbery cases was made last week it was necessary for the officer to take the cold drive to Gettysburg between ten and eleven o'clock at night, there being no place in Biglerville where the prisoner could be placed with safety. The new lock-up will do away with any such situation in the future as well as providing for offenders who are not of so serious a character as to require their incarceration in the county jail.

Tramps will doubtless find a night's lodging there if their stay in the upper end town proves annoying to its residents and the very presence of the bastille will, it is believed, have a wholesome influence on the community.

SWISHER—McCALL

Miss McCall, of Littlestown, Becomes Bride of Gettysburg Man.

Miss Anna Elizabeth McCall, of Littlestown, and Charles Edward Swisher, of Gettysburg, were married at 8 o'clock this morning in St. Aloysius church, Littlestown, by Rev. Fr. O'Callaghan. Miss Catherine Starr played the Mendelssohn March as the bride party entered the church.

The bride wore a brown broadcloth suit with a becoming hat. Her matron of honor was her sister, Mrs. Jules Eck, of Hanover, who wore a blue suit and black hat. A. Jay Eyer, of Harrisburg, was best man and the ushers were Jules J. Eck, of Hanover, and Gervaise Dick, of Littlestown.

A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Mary McCall, and during the morning Mr. and Mrs. Swisher left on a wedding trip. They will reside in Gettysburg upon their return. Mrs. Swisher is well known here having been engaged as stenographer for William McSherry Esq., for several years.

Mr. Swisher is a son of Mrs. Eliza Swisher, Gettysburg. He is a graduate of the Catholic High School and is now connected with the Funkhouser store. He was formerly proprietor of the Book Store, on Baltimore street, and for some years prior to that was a clerk with Dougherty and Hartley.

PLAN BIG THINGS ON THE MOUNTAIN

Jason Crout Likely to Build New Hotel at Pen Mar. Other Hostleries will be Improved. Western Maryland to Feature Resort.

Pen Mar park is to undergo more extensive changes and improvements in preparation for the approaching season than in any previous year.

The Pen Mar hotel, which has been under management of Jason Crout for many years, will be under a different management this season.

It is stated that John J. Gibbons, a well-known Princeton man, and one of the proprietors of the Blue Mountain House, at the time of its destruction by fire, August 5, 1913, will succeed Mr. Crout and will arrive at the park within the next few weeks to make arrangements for the opening of the hostelry in the latter part of May.

Mr. Crout, it is also reported, will still be one of the fixtures of the famous Blue Ridge summer resort—Pen Mar—and is negotiating for the erection of a hotel just outside the entrance to the park, to contain forty rooms, which will be fitted up with the latest improvements and will look after the patronage and comfort of a large contingent of his former guests and friends.

H. H. Myers, the owner and proprietor of the Imperial hotel and store, expects to make a number of improvements to the buildings.

He will repaint both of the buildings and expects to install a number of private bath rooms, and do other things to the interior of the hotel that will add to the comfort and convenience of his many patrons.

William Libby, who has charge of the amusement concessions at Pen Mar, will soon arrive on the grounds and begin work shaping up for the approaching season.

Besides having charge of a number of attractions, Mr. Libby expects to add many more. He will make additions to the old ones and expects to build more buildings to house others.

It is said that the management of the railroad was well pleased with the business at Pen Mar last season, and that it was one of the best paying properties on the route from Baltimore to Cumberland.

LOCAL GROWERS APPROVE BILL

Plan to Re-arrange Conduct of State Department of Agriculture Meets with the Good Wishes of Adams County Rural People.

Adams County orchardists and farmers favor the reorganization of the State Department of Agriculture along the lines proposed in the bill which has the sanction of Governor Brumbaugh.

Briefly stated the bill places all activities of the Department of Agriculture, whose function is conservation of improved land and to encourage the raising of foodstuffs, under control of a commission of seven, to be appointed by the Governor and to receive $1,500 each per year. All acts are repealed and the several bureaus are recreated along the lines now followed but with provision for extension or such changes as the Governor may want to bring about. The commission is to name a secretary of agriculture who is to be the executive officer and to receive $5,000 per year. He shall make the appointments in the department subject to approval of the commissioners and there is express requirement that the department must prepare a budget for the Legislature.

The bill will do away with any question regarding authority and do away with overlapping of work, although the details will be worked out by the commission. As the condition is now there has been some question as to whom certain officials report and whether they may proceed their own way in their bureaus without submitting their plans for approval.

Behind the bill are the State Grange, the State Horticultural Association, the State Breeders, the State Dairy Union and other organizations and the agricultural committees of the State Bankers, the committees on agriculture of the railroads, the agricultural press and all other elements interested in progressive agriculture.

GUARANTEED FOR COUGHS

A Good, Cheap, Home-Made Remedy

Money spent for the old-style, ready-made cough syrups in bottles holding only 2 to 2 1/2 ounces is very largely wasted, because most of them are composed principally of sugar and water. You have to pay the same price as if it was all medicine. Stop wasting this money. You can make a better cough medicine at home at one-fifth the cost. Merely go to the drug store named below and ask for 2 ounces (50c worth) of Schiffman's Concentrated Expectant. Mix this with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of boiling water, which makes a full pint (16 ounces). This new, simple, pleasant remedy is guaranteed to relieve the worst cough or cold. Also excellent for Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, Hoarseness and Whooping Cough. One bottle will make enough home-made cough medicine to probably last the whole family the entire winter. Children like it, it is so pleasant to take. It positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics, as do most cough mixtures. It is altogether different from all others. Keep it on hand in case of emergency and stop each cough before it gets a firm hold. These druggists, in fact Druggists everywhere, have been authorized to return the money in every single case where it does not give perfect satisfaction or is not found the best remedy ever used. You will be the sole judge, and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy. Your druggist has this remedy or will get it for you. If not, order direct of R. J. Schiffman, St. Paul, Minn. Guaranteed here by People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, Pa.

GERMANS HALTED NEAR WARSAW

Russians Prepare to Take Offensive in Poland.

ENEMY FLEES ON BZURA

The Kaiser Rushes Troops to East Prussia to Engage Enemy in Big Battle.

Warsaw, Feb. 9.—The reaction that followed the cessation of the fierce German aggressive movement in the region of Humin and Borjow and the transfer of German troops northward to initiate a new offensive in the East Prussian country, has provided the Russian forces in Poland with an opportunity for the long-heralded offensive.

Its ultimate result, in the opinion of Russian military observers, will be the expulsion of German forces from west Poland.

Ever since the German attack on Borjow, which reached its climax on Thursday, the number of German troops between the junction of the Bzura river and Borjow has been decreasing.

Following their failure to make material headway against the Russian line which protected Humin and Borjow, the Germans moved their attack to the right bank of the Vistula, northwest of Warsaw, between Lipno and Sierpiec. This offensive, however, was not comparable in intensity to the former, and it evidently was only an interlude to mask an important transfer of German troops in the direction of East Prussia.

The new Russian advance, according to the latest and most reliable information reaching Warsaw, already has been successful between the junction of the Brura and Vistovitz rivers, where they have taken a number of German trenches and started the enemy upon a precipitate retreat, in which the Germans left a large number of pieces of artillery behind them.

Russian military observers in Poland find in the disorder and disorganization evidenced in this German retreat increasing proof of what they call the weakening of the German morale.

Minor Russian victories are claimed in East Prussia and northern Poland.

Germans Move on Russian Invaders. Berlin, Feb. 9.—East Prussia, where Field Marshal von Hindenburg won his great victory over the Russians early in the war, is to be the scene of another great conflict, the opening skirmishes of which have already been fought.

While some uneasiness has been caused in Berlin by the fact that practically no news of importance from the eastern war theater has been given out for several days, this was explained by a statement that important strategic moves had been in progress for some time.

Unofficial reports that three corps (120,000 men) had been sent to the East Prussian front and that Emperor William had himself gone to Konigsberg, gave rise to the belief that the long-expected general battle in East Prussia is about to begin.

Mongolians Fight Russia.

Petrograd, Feb. 9.—Russia has another war on her hands. A revolt against the domination of the Mongolian government by Russia has broken out.

Five hundred Russian soldiers were dispatched from Mukden, Manchuria, to take the field against 2000 Mongolian insurgents concentrated near Trin Ting and Tian.

When Mongolia seceded from China at the time of the formation of the Chinese republic, Russia guaranteed the integrity of the new Mongolian government.

Rumanians Fight Austrians.

Paris, Feb. 9.—Austrian troops have violated the Rumanian frontier near Turn Severin, the Journal is informed in a dispatch from its Nish correspondent. The Austrians are reported to have fired on frontier guards who attempted to oppose their passage and a furious fight followed.

Strong reinforcements came to the help of the Rumanians, and after a three-hour struggle the Austrians are reported to have been driven back across the line with a large number of wounded.

The incident, which occurred several days ago, has not been followed up by either side, the Journal reports.

STUBBORN BAYONET FIGHTING IN FOREST

German Attack in Argonne Falls to Dislodge French.

London, Feb. 9.—The principal activity on the western war front appears to be in the vicinity of La Bassee, below the Belgian boundary, in the Champagne region, and in the Argonne, further east.

The fighting is mostly between artillery, except at Bagatelle, in the Argonne, where a severe infantry engagement has been in progress since Sunday morning.

The battle was started by the Germans and the Paris official report says the French are holding their ground. Berlin says part of a trench they lost near La Bassee has been retaken.

A German trench at Carenay, northwest of Arras, was blown up and the occupants killed or captured.

Despite the critical situation in the eastern theater of war, Austria is sending reinforcements to strengthen the German armies in Alsace-Lorraine. Artillery is being transported from upper Austria and Bohemia.

In the fighting east of St. Die and Altkirch a number of Austrian artillerymen were taken prisoners. These prisoners told their captors that a large number of Austrian guns have been concentrated near Strassburg and Metz and also at Muehlhausen.

The country has been devastated by warfare. Farms are deserted and towns and cities are in ruins from the shell fire or conflagrations set by the bombardments. Hundreds of homeless have made their way to Strassburg. The weather in the Vosges continues foggy, with frequent falls of snow.

Germans Recapture Trench. Berlin, Feb. 9.—The war department gave out an official statement, which read:

"The fighting for our positions south of the canal and southwest of La Bassee continues. Part of the short trench taken by the enemy has been recaptured."

"In the Argonne we wrested from our opponents a portion of their fortified positions; otherwise there has been no change of importance in the region."

ASQUITH TELLS OF LOSSES

AIRMEN DESTROY TURKISH GUNS

British Drop Bombs on Foe Near Suez Canal.

FLY 132 MILES IN SAFETY

Damaged Enemy's Desert Water Supply and Blew Up Several Supply Trains.

Cairo, Feb. 9.—Three Turkish batteries east of the Suez canal were wrecked and another badly damaged in a daring attack by two British aviators on Saturday.

The aviators covered 132 miles in their flight and returned safely. Setting out from their station early in the morning, the aviators flew at a height of 5000 feet over the positions held by the Turks.

The aviators dropped seventeen bombs. The gunners of the batteries which were wrecked were killed, as were three men near another battery which was damaged.

Afterward the aviators flew over the caravan routes east of the canal and dropped bombs upon the wells on which the Turks depend for their water. On their return they destroyed a convoy of supply wagons.

Two facts emerge from the scanty details allowed to reach Cairo of the battle on the canal last Tuesday and Wednesday. They are that the fighting was a good deal fiercer and the Turkish troops were a good deal luckier than was at first supposed.

The repulse was complete and it would certainly have been turned into a rout had not the obvious British policy been to refuse all temptations to be drawn into dangerous and difficult operations in the wilderness.

To the Turks must be given credit not only for having brought a considerable force to bear on the canal but also for having charged that barrier with courage, little short of heroic.

Out of 200 Turks that attacked a point on the canal immediately opposite the Tusan railway station, eight were killed and the remainder were wounded or captured. At another point, out of 400 men who had undertaken the task of bridging the canal, hardly any escaped.

Instead of pontoons the enemy used kerosene cans covered with planks. When experimented with on Lake Tiberias the plan worked admirably, and the time have the advantage of holding a good supply of drinking water before being turned to account by the engineers. In practice they have the disadvantage of sinking at once under machine gun fire.

British Menaced From Two Sides.

Berlin, by wireless, Feb. 9.—British forces in Egypt are menaced from both the west and east, according to information given out by the official German news bureau.

A dispatch published by an Italian newspaper announces that 20,000 Bedouin tribesmen had occupied the Siwah oasis, southwest of Cairo, and that Sudanese troops in the British army were deserting, one officer taking 200 men into the Turkish army from Suez.

Dardanelles Fort Damaged.

Athens, Feb. 9.—The Turkish fort at Kareda is reported in a dispatch from Tenedos to have been badly damaged by the explosion of magazines there, when two ammunition depots were set on fire by shells from Anglo-French warships. This is expected to hasten the fall of all the Dardanelles fortifications.

Fired 174 Shells.

London, Feb. 9.—Four torpedo boats of the allies have bombarded the Turkish forts on the Dardanelles, according to the Exchange Telegraph company. One hundred and seventy-four shells were discharged and two ammunition depots were set on fire.

DACIA READY TO SAIL

British Cruiser Hovers Near as Cotton Ship Prepares to Leave.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 9.—The steamer Dacia moved out from her dock, apparently preparing to sail on her voyage to Rotterdam with cotton from Galveston for Bremen.

Captain McDonald took out clearances papers and said he would sail before night on the usual steamer lanes. Five members of the crew left the ship at Norfolk.

Great Britain, questioning the validity of the transfer of the Dacia from German to American registry, has given notice she will seize the ship and pay for the cargo. The case probably will be tried out in a prize court. A British cruiser has been in the vicinity of Norfolk for some time.

Working Full Time at Singer Plant.

Elizabeth, N. J., Feb. 9.—The assembling department, one of the largest at the Singer Sewing Machine company's works, has announced a return of all men on a full time schedule. At the office of the management it was said that the entire plant will be back on the schedule within another month. Early last fall about 50 per cent of the 3000 employees were laid off.

PEACE MOVE URGED IN LA FOLLETTE BILL

Calls on Neutral Nations to End the War.

Washington, Feb. 9.—An international conference of representatives of neutral nations to discuss means of ending the European war, to establish neutral trade routes at sea and to propose the ultimate creation of an international tribunal for the establishment of world peace, was proposed in a resolution by Senator La Follette.

The resolution would direct the president to convey to all neutral nations the desirability of a conference to bring about the cessation of European hostilities, to extend offers of mediation to warring nations, to consider rules for the general limitation of armaments, rules for prohibition of exportation of munitions of war, the creation of a federation of neutral nations to provide for neutrality of ocean trade routes, consideration of the rights of neutral commerce and all other matters that may tend to establish permanent world peace.

The president would be empowered to appoint commissioners of the United States at such conference, whether called by this country or any other nation.

The resolution was received by unanimous consent and allowed to lie on the table for future consideration.

WOMEN IN STRIKE RIOT

Storm Gates of Roosevelt Plants as Men Try to Go to Work.

Roosevelt, N. J., Feb. 9.—A crowd of angry women stormed the gates of the Liebig and the Williams & Clark fertilizer plants here, where nineteen strikers were shot by deputies on Jan. 13, and administered a beating to Elmer Osborne, chief engineer at the Liebig works, and Frank Davis, a clerk at the Williams & Clark plant. Both men were rescued by special policemen.

The trouble started when some of the men attempted to go to work for $1.60 a day. This was the wage they received at the time of the strike, the previous wage having been $2 a day.

The women jeered and hooted the men going to work and when Osborne and Davis appeared attacked them. One man among the women was arrested.

Bread Six Cents in New York.

New York, Feb. 9.—Housewives in Greater New York will have to pay six cents instead of five cents a loaf for bread tomorrow. Announcement that the price would be advanced one cent was made today by several large baking concerns.

Society Woman Killed.

Baltimore, Feb. 9.—Mrs. Clapham Murray, one of Baltimore's most prominent society women, was struck and killed by an auto truck.

SCHOOL EXHIBIT

Will Precede Meeting of Parent Teachers' Association.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the monthly meeting of the Parent Teachers' Association on Friday evening announce the following numbers: piano duet, Miss Mary Himes and Miss Isabel Daniels; vocal solo, Miss Reba Miller, address, Prof. R. M. MacNeal; vocal duet, Miss Pauline Rodisill and Miss Daisy Wentz; violin solo, Miss Gladys Burgeon.

The departments of Domestic Science and Manual Training of the Gettysburg High School are arranging for an exhibit of their work next Friday evening, February 12. It is the time for the regular meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association which begins at 7:30. The doors of the building will be open at 6:30 so that visitors may have ample time for observing the pupils' work before the meeting as well as at its close. In the hall will be found an elaborate display of the woodwork done by the boys, consisting of handy house articles, furniture etc. The sewing department will exhibit quite an array of garments and crochet work. In the kitchen and dining room will be shown the tempting products of the culinary art. All these articles of food will be for sale at reasonable prices and, judging from former food sales, the demand will be greater than the supply. Buyers will be allowed to purchase articles at the start but not to remove them until the close of the meeting.

It is felt that the work of these departments has been unusually successful this year and a cordial invitation is extended to all to visit the school at this time and inspect the work. For those who may desire to come during the day much of the material will be arranged in the morning, and visitors will be welcome all day Friday.

WAR MAIL BAG VIVID LETTERS

English Corporal Tells How It Feels to Get the Brunt of Cavalry Charge.

BRINGS MANY FROM THE FRONT

Brooklyn Woman Writes of Magic Cup—Dramatic Misadventure of Dying Soldier.

THE war mail bag is just now a prolific source of interest. Vivid letters from soldiers at the front or in hospital bases and scraps of news from the front with the "silent fleet" mirror the actualities of war with a wealth of intimate detail and picturesque personal touches impossible to the harshly censored war correspondent.

The following is written from the front by Corporal T. Trainor:

"We have had German cavalry thrown at us six times in the last four hours, and each time it has been a different body, so that they must have plenty to spare. There is no eight hours for work, eight hours for sleep and eight hours for play with us, whatever the Germans may do.

"The strain is beginning to tell on them more than on us, and you can see by the weary faces and trembling hands that they are beginning to break down.

"One prisoner taken by the French near Courtrai sobbed for an hour as though his heart were broken, his nerves were so much shaken by what he had been through. The French are fighting hard all around us with a grit and go that will carry them through.

"Have you ever seen a little man fighting a great big, hulky giant who keeps on forcing the little chap about the place until the giant tires himself?

trouser legs were blowing in the breeze I think I was very lucky."

A gun room officer on a battle cruiser writes:

"The particular ship we were engaged with was in a pitiful plight when we had finished with her—her funnels shot away, masts tottering, great gaps of daylight in her sides, smoke and flame belching from her everywhere. She speedily heeled over and sank like a stone, stern first. So far as is known, none of her crew was saved. She was game to the last, let it be said, her flag flying till she sank, her guns barking till they could bark no more.

"Although we ourselves suffered no loss, we had some very narrow escapes. Three torpedoes were observed to pass us, one within a few feet. Four inch shells, too, fell short or were ahead of us. The sea was alive with the enemy's submarines, which, however, did us no damage. They should not be underrated, these Germans. That cruiser did not think apparently of surrendering.

What naval warfare seems like to the "black squad" imprisoned in the engine room is described by an engineer of the Laurel, who went through the "scrap" off Heligoland. Writing to his wife, he says:

"It was a terribly anxious time for us. I can tell you, as we stayed down there keeping the engines going at their top speed in order to cut off the Germans from their fleet. We could hear the awful din around and the scumpering of the tugs on deck as they rushed about from point to point, and we knew what was to the fore when we caught old glimpses of the stretchers with their ghastly burdens.

"We heard the shells crashing against the sides of the ship or shrieking overhead as they passed harmlessly into the water, and we knew that at any moment one might strike us in a vital part and send us below for good.

"It is ten times harder on the men whose duty it is in the engine room than for those on deck taking part in the fighting, for they at least have the excitement of the fight, and if the ship is struck they have more than a sporting chance of escape. We have none."

Chocolate Favorite Ration.

"We call the Germans the 'chocolate soldiers,'" writes a soldier from the front, "because they appear to be always eating chocolate. When they are attacked or are attacking, when they are wounded or sick, by night and day, it's all the same. We have found some of their dead with cakes of chocolate between their fingers.

"During one of our Christmas armistices one of the German soldiers told me that the chocolate ration had been recommended by scientists as a convenient and exceedingly nutritious food and had sustained them very well in some of their long marches where other foods were not available."

From a Dying Frenchman.

The most dramatic letters come from the French. On one of the fields of battle, when the Red Cross soldiers were collecting the wounded after a heavy engagement, there was found a half sheet of notepaper, on which was written a message for a woman of which this is the translation:

"Sweetheart—Fate in this present war has treated us more cruelly than any others. If I have not lived to create for you the happiness of which both our hearts dreamed, remember that my sole wish is now that you should be happy. Forget me. Create for yourself some happy home that may restore to you some of the great pleasures of life. For myself I shall have died happy in the thought of your love. My last thought has been for you and for those I leave at home. Accept this last kiss from him who loved you."

Writing from a fortress on the front.

Uncle Eben.

"Mebbe dar'd be a heap mo' work done," said Uncle Eben, "if dey got out a new m' del of wheelbarrow every year an' provided a horn so's to make folks git out'n de way."

tier, a French officer says the colonel in command was asked to send a hundred men to stiffen some reservist artillery in the middle of France, far away from the area. He called for volunteers. "Some of you who have got wives and children or old mothers fall out," he said. Not a man stirred. "Come, come," the colonel went on. "No one will dream of saying you funk—nothing of that kind. Fall out!" Again the ranks were unbroken. The colonel blew his nose violently. He tried to speak severely, but his voice faltered. He tried to frown, but somehow it turned into a smile. "Very well," he said, "you must draw lots." And that was what they did.

The Magic Cup.

Mrs. Edward L. Snyder of Brooklyn, who was in Europe when the hostilities began, has written the following letter regarding the use of paper cups in the war zone:

"When I left New York in July I took four dozen paper cups with me, knowing the difficulty in Europe of procuring anything to drink out of that was clean while traveling. The hygienic idea has been so firmly impressed during the past few years by the paternalism of the city government that as a good citizeness I took the cups.

"I was caught in Brussels at the beginning of the war and forced to make a hurried flight, having only my handbag with me, which fortunately contained one dozen of the drinking cups. Reaching Ostend we were driven like sheep on a waiting steamer in a broiling August day. Water was almost impossible, and if we could have got it we would have no means to drink, as our hands were hardly large enough to hold the draft.

"We formed a party of sixteen, all strangers to me, and sat around in a circle, one gentleman having three bottles of beer and I a quart of Louvain beer.

"They said, 'Here's the beer, but can we all drink out of the bottles?' I said, 'We don't have to.' 'Why,' they said, 'Because I have cups in my bag.'

"They looked at me and said, 'Are you a traveling china shop?' I said, 'No; neither china nor glass, but I have paper cups.' They laughed and thought I was fooling.

"I brought out my dozen cups to the amazement of all around me. I filled them all up with beer and handed a cup to each.

"They asked if they could retain their cups as souvenirs and asked me to write the name of the cup on the side and the date, which I gladly did, of course."

Safest in the Trenches.

"The safest place at this war is in the firing line," said an English soldier who came back on leave. "It is getting into the trenches or leaving them that men get hit. Once inside you're pretty safe."

"Food is brought up once a day to the nearest convenient place behind the lines, a farm or a shelter specially rigged up. Two men from each section are told off or volunteer to go back and get the supply. It usually is a mixture of hash and beans and potatoes in a tin, and when it is warmed up it makes an Irish stew that sends a warmth down to numbed toes and frozen fingers.

"Sometimes the twenty-four or forty-eight hours of duty in the trenches is varied by a German attack. An odd sight, as the men who have been through it say, those dense lines coming on, falling, wavering, breaking, closing up again, lying down at the word of command, rising on their knees to let off a ragged volley, then down again, then another advance, only to be stopped at last by the absolute certainty of death for every man if the attack is not recalled. The British Maxim rifle like an office full of typewriters, the men fire till the wood casing of their rifles is hot to the hand.

"However close the wave of foemen struggle it does not worry the British soldier now. The new principle is twenty-five yards of clear ground in front of his trench, and then, with one rifle to every yard, the British believe they can beat off any possible attack that can be delivered. That is the new principle. In fact, the English army has ceased to care much about having a big field of fire in front of its trenches. 'Let 'em come, and then pepper 'em' is the maxim in this war."

Afternoon Farmer.

An afternoon farmer is an English expression for one who puts off his work until the last moment.

JAPANESE COURT TRIALS.

The Judges, Not the Lawyers, Question the Witnesses.

The defendant in a Japanese court was testifying in his own behalf. He stood directly in front of the presiding judge, not ten feet distant from him, and answered his questions in a clear voice, without any apparent hesitation. The judge seemed conversant with the case, for he put questions rapidly, giving a funny little grunt of acquiescence after every answer. Occasionally one of the associates wrote a suggestion and handed it to the president, and once or twice the defendant's counsel asked the court to put a certain inquiry. The whole proceeding—and the same may be said of those in several other courts I visited—was conducted in a quiet, colloquial way. In every instance I was impressed with the simple, businesslike atmosphere.

Some of the Japanese lawyers with whom I have talked say that they feel that very often the court does not elicit all the facts and that our system of having witnesses questioned by counsel would be better, but, on the other hand, some lawyers maintain that better results are realized by the system, which puts upon the court the duty of getting at the truth, maintaining that the witnesses are more apt to talk frankly to the court than to the lawyer for the opposite side who is engaged, as they think, in trying to make them out liars.

I came away quite favorably impressed with what I saw and wondering whether on the whole in 95 per cent of the cases a decision by three judges trained in the investigation of facts would not be as nearly right as the verdict of twelve citizens casually gathered in from the general community.—George W. Wickersham in Case and Comment.

COAXING THE FURNACE.

Try Gentleness and the Uplift and Kindly, Soothing Words.

Treat your furnace kindly. Let your watchwords as a furnace tender be gentleness and uplift. Be firm with your furnace, but always gentle. Some persons imagine that the way to make a furnace behave properly is to first shake it violently and then maul the life out of the remaining coals with the poker. They try chastisement when they should try gentleness and uplift and only succeed in packing the coal harder and destroying ventilation, the secret of successful furnace tending.

Nothing responds more readily to uplift than does a furnace fire. When in the early morning you wish to arouse the furnace fire from its slumbers, you should first shake it gently, then gently tickle the ribs of the grate with the poker to make ventilation more perfect and then crack the top crust with a lever-like lifting use of the poker. In a minute the fire will be wide awake and in good humor, laughing and sticking out its tongues of flame at you in merriment.

Never swear at your furnace, no matter how it annoys you. That will make it sulky and obstinate. You never saw a furnace which was sworn at often which was not frequently sulky and obstinate. Now, did you? It is advisable to take the directly opposite tack. I know a man who always addresses his furnace as "sweetheart" or "darling," and he assures me the plan works to perfection. "Maybe it doesn't really make the furnace warm up the way it seems to," he frankly admits. "Maybe the mere suggestion just keeps me from losing my temper and hammering my fire to pieces. But, anyway, the results are excellent. Savvy?"—Lee Shippey in Judge.

Aisle on the Car in a Wreck.

A veteran railroad man gave a piece of valuable advice not long ago. "If you ever get into a wreck," he said, "and have time to follow out this suggestion, remember this: Always stand in the aisle. Most of the injuries that are suffered occur because the victim is crushed between the seats. If you are in the aisle you may be thrown forward and bruised a little, but there is much less chance of receiving serious hurts. It isn't always possible to get out of your seat before the crash comes, but if it is follow that advice."—Pittsburgh Press.

Dome of the Rock.

The name "Dome of the Rock" is one that has been conferred on the celebrated mosque of Omar, at Jerusalem. It stands on Mount Moriah, on the site once occupied by the temple of Solomon. Immediately under its dome an irregular shaped rock projects above the pavement. This rock was the scene of many Scriptural events and has been greatly revered for ages by Jews and Mohammedans.

IN A NAVAL FIGHT

Vital Work Is Done In the Control Room of the Vessel.

THE HEART OF THE WARSHIP.

Through This Steel Cell, Deep Under the Deck, the Commander in the Conning Tower Is in Touch With Every Person and Event on Board.

When a warship sails into action her heart pulses and throbs as eager for the fray as the hearts of any of her crew. Yes, a warship has a heart. The heart of a warship is the control room, deep down under the deck, situated aft, usually about the second funnel.

Even on big fighting ships the heart is small. Generally it is only ten feet by six, and is almost noise proof and eerily quiet. It is really a steel vault, entered by a door not unlike the door of a burglar proof safe.

From floor to ceiling the walls are lined with dials, wires, gauges, electric bells, speaking tubes, switches and a great amount of other apparatus which keeps the commander in constant touch with every corner of the ship. It is the most wonderful and the most fearful room on earth or sea.

It is a fortress within a fortress, a steel cell within the steel walls of the fighting engine.

To be in the control room during active service is to feel like being in a vault with the door locked on the outside. This little compartment, which visitors seldom see, will keep alive as long as there is a living soul on board able to hear and answer a call.

It is through the control room that the commander issues his instructions, observes and notes how the battle is going, calls the gun crews from place to place, directs the engineers, steers the whole fabric and supervises everything. If a submarine is seen in any direction it is through the control room that it is reported.

A little bell rings, a voice far away speaks. "Submarine on the port bow, sir, two leagues off." In an instant the answer thrills the gun crews: "Ware submarine on the port bow; enemy's craft. Ready!" The gunners have been ready for some time, and when the chief gunner has "laid" the gun to his satisfaction bang goes a message the enemy will not forget if it hits him.

If a gun has to cease fire the order comes through the control room. If the enemy lands a shell on deck or anywhere in the warship the doctors are notified that they are wanted at that spot almost as soon as the men have fallen. If the gun crew are dead it is from the heart of the ship that the order is given for fresh men to fill their places.

Though the captain himself is in the conning tower above, he knows through the officer in the control room just what has happened to his ship and the extent of the damage, and if the captain is killed in the conning tower or on the bridge the chief officer in the control room goes up at once to take his place.

There are generally about six men in this little throbbing heart of the warship, including operators and junior officers.

The chief officer gives directions to the torpedo operators, the gunners, the searchlight manipulators and the officers in charge of the fighting masts, if such are part of the ship's equipment. But, besides all this, there are a thousand and one things to attend to during an engagement.

Every order has to be given at an instant's notice, given distinctly, firmly, without the slightest hesitation or flurry. It is only in the control room that one learns what the phrase "devotion to duty" really means.

Everything goes with automatic precision in the heart of a warship, and as it is the most vital spot on board special care is taken to preserve it from harm.

Think of the steady nerves required of those men, cooped up in this small room when the shells are flying around and the hull is being battered by the enemy's guns! A wrong signal might mean disaster, but the organization is so near perfection that mistakes are practically unknown.

There is no rest for the officers in the control room during a fight. They must stay at the ship's heart telegraphing and telephoning to every part of the vessel, without taking notice of the wreckage that is being heaped up on every hand. They know that when the men in turret No. 1 or turret No. 2 cease to reply to their signals something serious has happened.

They know that even when the conning tower has been smashed by shot and shell and the bridge has been swept away they must stick to their switches so long as there is an officer alive to direct operations. Not until the ship is blown up or rammed are they allowed to leave that little room, and then they go down with her.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A POSER FOR TENNYSON.

Poetry Was All Right, but Babbage Was a Stickler For Facts.

A well known engineer recently took a magazine writer to task, because the latter in an article on skyscrapers had used so many untechnical expressions.

The magazine writer replied to the criticism by suggesting that the engineer would better absorb the story which is told of Lord Tennyson, the great English poet, and Charles Babbage, the famous English mathematician, and which illustrates the folly of attempting to measure literature with a footrule.

Tennyson once wrote a poem called "The Vision of Sin," with lines which ran:

Every moment dies a man,
Every moment one is born.

Babbage wrote to the poet:

"In your otherwise beautiful poem there is a verse which reads:

"Every moment dies a man,
Every moment one is born."

"It must be manifest that were this true the population of the world would be at a standstill. In truth the rate of birth is slightly in excess of that of death."

"I would suggest that in the next issue of your poem you have it read:

"Every moment dies a man,
Every moment 1.1 is born."

"Strictly speaking, that is not correct. The actual figure is a decimal so long I cannot get it in the line, but I believe 1.16 will be sufficiently accurate for poetry. I am," etc.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Culinary Courtship.

Janet had molded the domestic affairs of the family with whom she lived for so many years that the news of her intended marriage had much the effect of an earthquake. "Have you and David been engaged long?" ventured the mistress of the household.

"One week when next Sabbath comes," stated Janet briefly.

"And—and had you any thought of marrying before that?" asked her mistress.

"Times I had and times I had not," said the imperturbable Janet. "As any person will. But a month ago when I gave David a wee bit of the cake I'd been making and he said to me 'Janet, have you the recipe firm in your mind, lass, so you could make it if Mrs. Mann's book would be far from your reach?' I knew well the time was drawing short."

"And when," said Janet, closing her eyes at the recollection, "I said to him, 'David, had the recipe in a little book of my own,' and I saw the glint in his eye I reckoned 'twould be within the month he'd ask me."

Kitty Felt Guilty.

It was Kitty's first dinner party. As her dinner escort was presented to her she noticed that he was a member of the new family who had recently moved into the house directly across the street from her. During the meal there chanced to be a discussion of various kinds of beautiful profiles. Wishing to say something complimentary to the shy debutante, Kitty's partner remarked: "If you will allow me to say so, your own profile is very charming. I should think you would be tempted to spend a great deal of time standing before your mirror with a hand glass admiring the pretty curves."

To which Kitty, blushing scarlet, asked, "Are you joking, or have you really seen me do that?"

Old Benjamin Dwyer was accustomed to treat his guests with sweet cider, and, although the barrel stood in the darkest corner of a dark cellar, he never carried a lamp on his trips for a fresh supply. One evening Mr. Brookings, the minister, was his guest.

"It must be quite an art to fill the pitcher so accurately in the dark with our running it over," said Mr. Brookings.

"Want, no, 'tain't 'xactly difficult," Benjamin replied. "You see, when the cider gets up to the first joint of my thumb I stop."

ITCHING ECZEMA IS DRIED RIGHT UP WITH SULPHUR

Use like cold cream to subdue irritation and clear the skin.

Any breaking out or irritation on the face, arms, legs and body when accompanied by itching, or when the skin is dry and feverish, can be readily overcome by applying a little bold-sulphur, says a noted dermatologist.

He informs us that bold-sulphur instantly allays the angry itching and irritation and soothes and heals the Eczema right up leaving the skin clear and smooth. Bold-sulphur has occupied a secure position for many years in the treatment of cutaneous disorders because of its parasite-destroying property. Nothing has ever been found to take its place in treating the irritable and inflammatory skin affections. While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to subdue the itching irritation and drive the Eczema away and it is often years later before any eruption again appears.

Those troubled should obtain from any druggist an ounce of bold-sulphur, which is applied to the affected parts in the same manner as an ordinary cold cream. It isn't unpleasant, and the prompt relief afforded, particularly in itching Eczema, proves very welcome.

An Incident of the Chicago Fire

By JOHN TURNLEE

Kimball Burroughs came of age in the autumn of 1871. His birthday occurred on the 8th of October, and he celebrated the event by giving a dinner. I was present and have occasion to remember the date perfectly. The 8th of October that year fell on Sunday. How I happen to remember this will appear as I proceed with my story. Two other events in Burroughs' life were celebrated at that dinner. It was a farewell to his bachelor friends, for he was to be married the next evening, and he came into possession of $500,000 invested in negotiable securities.

The autumn of 1871 was a very dry season. Chicago, the city in which we were living, had experienced a series of fires. While we were dining fire engines went clanging by incessantly. Lifting a curtain of a west window, I saw a great yellow glare. In less than an hour every one of us had left the dinner table and gone out to witness the beginning of the great Chicago fire.

Burroughs' wedding did not take place the next day, for his home, the home of his fiancée and the church he was to have been married in were all either in flames or in ruins. What troubled Burroughs most was a fear that his securities might have been destroyed. They were in the keeping of his guardian, and his guardian was among those who were missing after the fire had satisfied its hunger.

A soon as the ruins had cooled Burroughs began a search for his fortune. It was not found at the safety deposit company where his lawyer, Samuel Coolidge, had kept valuables. The office safe had tumbled from the fourth story of the building, and everything in it had been burned to powder. These two incidents taken together convinced Burroughs that he had lost his fortune, for the securities were not of the registered kind, but in the nature of a banknote. At any rate, if he recovered any of his inheritance he could do so only after a long process.

As soon as Burroughs was convinced of this he went to his fiancée and offered to release her. She wept and moaned and vowed that she could never love any one else, but did not give any definite answer to his offer. But when a month had passed and her lover was hard pressed for money to meet his immediate expenses she turned him down. We who had attended our friend's bachelor dinner felt that he had made a narrow escape. Miss Etherling, the lady in question, had in her own right something like $20,000. This gave her an income of but $1,000 a year, and she needed much more than that to enable her to keep up her position in society.

One day about three months after the fire I met Burroughs on the street. He approached me with a radiant countenance.

"You've found your fortune," I said. "Guess again."

"Give it up."

"I've got a new sweetheart."

"You don't mean it."

He briefly told me how a girl who had loved him long had been grieved at his engagement with Miss Etherling and had consented to take him with his poverty. I congratulated him heartily, and we parted each about his own affairs. Burroughs' new love—a Miss Tisdale—was poor as a church mouse, and I feared that since Kimball had been brought up to expect a fortune they would have a hard life.

We were all very busy after the Chicago fire, and I saw nothing of Burroughs for some time. On returning from a business trip I found on my desk an invitation from him for another bachelor dinner previous to his marriage with Miss Tisdale, to be given at the most expensive hotel in the city. I was too busy during the day to learn anything further about his affairs and went to the dinner with no knowledge of them except what I have stated. The guests were all seated at the table when I entered, and Burroughs stood at one end.

He beckoned me to a vacant seat beside him, but since he was standing with a glass of wine in his hand, as if about to give a toast, I remained standing, and a waiter filled my glass. It was evident from Burroughs' manner and that of his guests that something important was to be announced.

"My friends," he said, "perhaps some of you have not heard of my good fortune, so I will inform you. Recently the debris left by the fire has been cleared away for a building to be erected on La Salle street. Under the ruins was found a safe, the contents of which were in perfect condition. One bundle of papers turned out to be my securities."

"The remains of a man were discovered also and identified as those of my guardian, Samuel Coolidge. He had doubtless removed the contents of his firm's box from the safety deposit vaults and carried them out into the street. Driven by the fire into another building, he had found an opportunity to put them into a safe, but, penned in by flames, was unable to escape."

"I propose his memory, standing and in silence."

It is quite likely that there were many other cases of devotion to duty during that pandemonium, the heroes and the heroines of which were buried under the ruins, not to be exhumed.

Burroughs and his wife, their children and their grandchildren are living, a happy and united family. Miss Etherling died a disappointed old maid.

SNAPSHOTS AT NOTABLE PERSONS

General Ferdinand Foch, Famous French Soldier.

When the Germans began their movement against Dunkirk and Calais in order to obtain control of the French coast of the English channel a new French army was organized and placed under the command of General Ferdinand Foch, an officer who had the full confidence of General Joffre.

General Foch co-operated with General Sir John French of the British forces in throwing a barrier of soldiers across all the roads leading to Dunkirk and Calais. The French commander was charged with the responsibility of holding back the Germans along the Belgian frontier and around Arras. Always keeping on the defensive, he succeeded in stopping the enemy. Since the middle of September General Foch has demonstrated that his ability is as great on the aggressive as in defensive warfare.

An advocate of big guns, General Foch believes that, other conditions being equal, the larger cannon will win. General Foch's tactics have been to hold his infantry under shelter until the enemy's first line of fortifications has been rendered untenable.

General Foch, although one of the younger of the French commanders, is considered one of the ablest. For his services in protecting the English channel he received grateful recognition from King George, who on Dec. 7 conferred on him the decoration of the Order of the Bath.

High Chancellor of England.

Richard Burdon, Viscount Haldane, lord high chancellor of Great Britain, who has recently been attacked by the British press, is considered one of the foremost lawyers and statesmen of his time. He was appointed to his present post in 1912 and previously had been secretary of state for war for seven years. Charges have been made against him in the British press that he was pro-German and accusing him of responsibility for some of the misfortunes of the army.

Viscount Haldane was born in Scotland in 1856 and was educated at the Universities of Edinburgh and Göttingen.

VISCOUNT HALDANE.

gen. In 1885 he was elected a member of the house of commons, where he sat until he was raised to the peerage in 1911. His appointment to the cabinet as minister of war in 1905 occasioned much surprise, as he had been distinguished only for his knowledge of philosophy and the law. His administration of the war office, though able and of seven years' duration, was not popular. What finally caused his removal from the war office and his appointment as lord high chancellor was his trip to Berlin in 1912, when he was paid by Sir Edward Grey to have posed as an emissary of the British government without authority of the foreign office. In the summer of 1913 Viscount Haldane visited this country and Canada by invitation of the American Bar Association.
